

PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S NETWORK PRESENTS "Organizing Vital Information for End of Life"

KAREN SIMON, Island Organizers

People often put more thought into preparing for their family vacation than planning for the end-of-life experience we'll all have. Karen Simon, the former president of the Hawaii Association of Professional Organizers, uses her expertise to help clients put technology to use as an efficient and organizing tool.

Come to the June 27 meeting of the Professional Women's Network when Karen Simon of Island Organizers will present ways to help elders prepare by:

- Identifying what's important
- Gathering & storing vital documents
- Sharing info with those who "need to know"

Karen Simon founded a technology company in LA "umpteens" years ago, and ten years ago she took her expertise to Hawaii, forming the partnership, Island Organizers, specializing in helping small businesses become better organized.

Attend the Professional Women's Network luncheon on June 27 and meet Karen Simon. Learn how the technological advances in the last two decades can help you prepare and manage your parents' end-of-life and put your own life in order too. Bring your business cards and a guest!
