NICOLE CHATTERSON

Director, Zero Waste O`ahu

Small changes in what we buy are directly connected to our economy and waste stream. Plastic in our oceans may well outnumber fish by 2050—an impact very real to our Island community. By rethinking what we buy, we can generate less waste (and signal to producers that a less wasteful economy is important).

Nicole Chatterson, director of Zero Waste O`ahu, has been involved in the waste-reduction movement since 2009, when she sailed through the Pacific Garbage Patch and saw first-hand how much consumer choices and production systems are impacting our planet. Nicole has a B.A. in Environmental Science and Policy and an M.A. in Environmental Anthropology from UH Mānoa. She also works as the Living Lab Coordinator at the University of Hawai`i System Office of Sustainability.

Come to the September 26 Professional Women's Network luncheon when Nicole will discuss reducing our footprint and the potential for our production system to change. Learn easy, tangible ways to reduce waste; why recycling is not enough (and how to recycle properly on O`ahu); and ways you can get involved in your community to help reduce waste. Bring a guest and your business cards!
